This letter is to certify that Ms. Karuna Anie Kosle conceptualized, organized, and led a Financial Literacy Initiative conducted in collaboration with community stakeholders during December 2025 and January 2026.

The initiative was designed to improve financial awareness and practical money management skills among underserved populations, including rural women, school students, and young adults. Through approximately ten workshop cohorts reaching nearly 300 participants, the program focused on delivering accessible financial education to individuals with limited exposure to formal financial training.

As the founder and project lead, Ms. Karuna developed the educational framework and curriculum for the initiative. She recruited, trained, and supervised a team of volunteers, ensuring that the content delivered remained accurate, practical, and relevant to participants' needs. In addition to overseeing the program, she personally facilitated several workshop sessions and guided volunteers responsible for conducting others.

Workshop topics included:

- Basic banking and account management
- Savings and budgeting strategies
- Digital payments and online transactions
- Loans and interest fundamentals
- Fraud awareness and financial safety
- Responsible financial decision-making
- Introductory concepts related to investing

The workshops were conducted across community-based venues, including NGO and church facilities, allowing participants from diverse backgrounds to access financial education in a supportive environment.

Feedback received from participants indicated increased confidence in managing personal finances, greater familiarity with banking services and digital payment systems, and improved understanding of budgeting and financial planning. The initiative was particularly impactful for rural women and students who previously had limited exposure to such concepts.

Throughout the project, Ms. Karuna demonstrated initiative, leadership, organizational ability, and a genuine commitment to community development. Her efforts played a meaningful role in expanding financial awareness among participants and empowering individuals with practical financial knowledge.

I am pleased to confirm her contribution and recommend her as a capable and socially conscious young leader.
